We hope everyone has cast their STRC vote for the semi-monthly dividend amendment! The deadline is June 7.

Reminder that you need to vote separately for MSTR and STRC shares. How to vote instructions are in Ella's post above. Please reach out to us directly if you face any issues.

Your job pays you twice a month. Shouldn't your shares? We propose moving Stretch to a semi-monthly dividend. What this could enable for STRC? More liquidity; better price stability; and even stronger demand. Here's how to vote for this change in 15 seconds. Search your inbox for the proxy vote email from your broker. Click "vote now". Find Proposal 5: STRC Semi Monthly Dividend Amendment. Select "For", and submit. STRC. Save different.

Matt Cole: One other thing I wanted to cover just a bit: since our last “Hurdle Rate”, Strategy had their retail Q&A, and I thought there were a lot of interesting things from that. One of them is — I think it's important. Daily dividends are obviously super exciting; they're groundbreaking innovation. Semi-monthly is also great, and it's never been done before. And I say that because Strategy obviously has a vote going on right now, and having been through the process of having to secure a vote — and helping both Semler secure a vote when we were doing M&A with them, helping Asset Entities secure a vote when we were trying to acquire them as part of our initial deal — is a pain in your rear to secure a vote, because retail shareholders don't vote.

And so I have no insider information. I have no idea how close they are to securing that vote. But I do know that data suggests that retail shareholders don't vote even when they would support something. And Stretch, I believe the last data said, was 80% retail-owned. So I think everybody owes it to themselves — I'm guessing a lot of people that listen to this are Strategy shareholders, Stretch shareholders — to not only vote, but go out there and whip the vote. Get this thing done for them. I think it's going to be great for the ecosystem. And it probably will be something that 95 to 99% of people are voting yes. You never can get 100% — there's always that one troll that just won't vote yes, that will vote no. But it's going to be overwhelmingly supported, almost for sure. And I can imagine that getting everybody to log in and vote is not the easiest thing. So help make that happen.
