

Horizon Kinetics Japan Owner Operator ETF

Investing Alongside Authentic Japanese Entrepreneurs

Investor focus on short-term returns and events can create significant mispricing of long-term investments. We believe a disciplined long-term investment horizon is key to minimizing potential losses and achieving superior returns. Moreover, investors allocating to Japan are essentially exposed to the dominant large-cap companies, which are almost necessarily global businesses with very little economic exposure to Japan. One is simply gaining exposure to multi-national export-oriented companies that happened to be domiciled in Japan.

We are building an authentically Japan-centric portfolio with revenue primarily sourced domestically, an exposure currently unavailable in mainstream indexes.

Our Advantages:

- We have a disciplined approach to fundamental research with a long-term horizon.
- We target companies with revenues predominantly derived from Japan, unlike most Japanese equity indexes.
- We build a concentrated portfolio, deliberately distinct from popular indexes, with a high active share* by design (i.e., 95%+).

Active Share is a measure of the percentage of stock holdings in a manager's portfolio that differs from the benchmark index.*

A New Era: Japan Finally Emerges as an Undervalued Developed Country Investment Opportunity

Japan is the second-largest developed economy in the world, and the third-largest overall, after the U.S and China. Japan has a 5% weighting in the ACWI.

Contrast this with the 63% U.S. market capitalization weighting in the index, which overwhelms its 26% share in global GDP. The main reason for the disproportionately higher weighting is because U.S. companies outperform non-American firms in terms of profitability. However, changes to this norm are already visible.

In February 2024, the Japanese market surpassed its historic high of 1989. That said, the Japanese equity market continue to be undervalued relative to its developed-market peers.

Concurrently, a historically unprecedented, regulator-mandated policy and rule changes in Japan are now altering its 75-year insular cycle of protected corporate structure. Notorious for its opaqueness and indifference toward shareholders, Japanese corporate management is now under pressure to incorporate return on equity, return on invested capital, and shareholder returns.

Compared to the rest of the world, Japan offers a compelling international investment diversification opportunity due to its lower valuation and superior fundamental prospects.

Under the Hood

What's in Your Japanese Index?

Investments in the Japanese market are predominantly placed in three ETFs, which capture over 80% of the AUM.

These traditional ETFs provide indexed exposure to Japan—and to the same concentration and misallocation risks as other markets.

- Only 3% of the opportunities account for almost two-thirds of the value of the entire Japanese stock market.
- The three main Japan ETFs invest in well-known, large-cap, highly-liquid companies with significant global business exposures.

The paradox: When investors seek the international diversification benefits of local economies, they're getting essentially the same exposures they already have. Like the S&P 500, these index funds are packed with global multinationals.

Japan the Nation vs Japan the Index

What's in Your Japanese Index?

The MSCI Japan Index contains slightly more than 1,800 companies and has fewer small-capitalization constituents. It is considered easier to trade as an index. As a result, the index is generally easier to trade and experiences less transactional friction. Consequently, MSCI Japan Index has become the dominant benchmark for Japanese equities.

The top 10 holdings of the iShares Japan ETF source a mere 33% of their revenue from Japan.

- With 67% of these sales derived from outside Japan, investors are more exposed to Japan's primary export markets—the U.S., Europe, and other developed economies—and their cyclicalities, not Japan's.
- Largest top holding is Toyota Motor Corp, followed by Sony Group, then Mitsubishi UFJ Financial Group.

Japanese Owner-Operators

Aligned Entrepreneurs with Competitive Moats

Japan's culture of Shushin Koyo, or lifetime employment, stifles innovation. New niche opportunities are often dismissed by the risk-averse agent management executives of established companies.

Hence, Japanese entrepreneurs gravitate toward the owner-operator structure, affording them the liberty to seek and capture uncharted business opportunities in Japan. They are also aligned with shareholders to maximize returns. And there are plenty of them: Japan produces 8% of all patent filings worldwide, behind only China at 47% and the U.S. at 17%¹.

Ironically, threats from abroad are also limited as language barriers combined with closed corporate structure create limited information access. Japan's mature macro economy—declining population and aging society—disincentive entrance from global competitors.

Hence, Japanese entrepreneurs have competitive moats over their stagnant corporate peers at home and distant investors abroad when it comes to opportunistically implementing and monetizing innovative ideas and business growth plans.

Vested Interest for Long-Term Value Creation

We're investing alongside visionary Japanese entrepreneurs who build niche and differentiated products and businesses with revenue primarily sourced domestically. Paradoxically, while deeply rooted in Japan, many are now experiencing a breakout moment—rapidly gaining market share globally.

Our research effort embodies independent thinking, collaboration, open debate, and humility. Philosophy and process lead us to explore areas less researched and omitted or underrepresented by major indices.

FUNDAMENTAL ANALYSIS

Consistent with our investment philosophy, our research focuses on fundamental analysis of business models and company operations. We structure our portfolios to achieve returns driven by the long-term returns-on-capital of the underlying businesses.

ACCESS TO LOCAL MANAGEMENT

An understanding of local culture and access to management provides valuable context and perspective for investments. We conduct multiple regional visits a year to research the evolution of certain companies, industries, and countries to develop informed views.

INDEPENDENT THOUGHT

Our research is independent. Dynamic, unconventional thinking is required to find successful long-term investments. We form our own hypotheses and opinions, then work to substantiate or invalidate them through proprietary research and primary sources.

PREDICTIVE ATTRIBUTES

Investment team avoids relying solely on conventional descriptive attributes and places greater emphasis on predictive attributes that are verifiable but not always readily quantifiable.

Important Risk Disclosures

Risk Considerations: Investing in securities entails risk, which may be subject but not limited to the following: When investing in securities, the market may not necessarily have the same value assessment as the manager, and therefore, the performance of the securities may decline. Under no circumstance does the information contained herein represent a recommendation to buy, hold or sell securities. All material presented is compiled from sources believed to be reliable, but no guarantee is given as to its accuracy or completeness. Murray Stahl is a member of the Board of Directors of Texas Pacific Land Corporation ("TPL") and Miami International Holdings ("MIAX"), both of which are holdings in certain client accounts and funds managed by Horizon Kinetics Asset Management LLC ("HKAM"). Officers, directors and employees may also hold substantial amounts of TPL and MIAX, both directly and indirectly, in their personal accounts. Investing involves risk, including the possible loss of principal. Shares of any ETF are bought and sold at market price (not NAV), may trade at a discount or premium to NAV and are not individually redeemed from the Fund. Brokerage commissions will reduce returns. The Fund's investments in securities linked to real assets involve significant risks, including financial, operating, and competitive risks. Investments in securities linked to real assets expose the Fund to potentially adverse macroeconomic conditions, such as a rise in interest rates or a downturn in the economy in which the asset is located. The Fund is non-diversified, meaning it may concentrate its assets in fewer individual holdings than a diversified fund. Therefore, the Fund is more exposed to individual stock volatility than a diversified fund. Risks Related to Investing in Japan. Japan's economy has historically lagged that of its Asian neighbors and other major developed economies due in part to economic, political and social conditions. Japan's economic growth is heavily dependent on international trade, government support of the financial services sector and other troubled sectors, as well as governmental policy supporting its export market. However, slowdowns in the economies of key trading partners, such as the U.S. and China, leading to decreased demand from these countries, new trade regulations, and changes in exchange rates may also have an adverse impact on the economy of Japan. The Fund may invest in the securities of smaller and mid-capitalization companies, which may be more volatile than funds that invest in larger, more established companies. The fund is actively managed and may be affected by the investment adviser's security selections.

The Horizon Kinetics Japan Owner Operator ETF (JAPN) is distributed by Foreside Fund Services, LLC ("Foreside"), Foreside is not affiliated with JAPN or Horizon Kinetics LLC or its subsidiaries.
